HISTORY OF HEMP

The Chinese Emperor Shen Hung recorded the first medicinal use of hemp, a plant previously known only for fibers and textiles.

1850

Hemp is grown by most major farms and is a staple of agriculture. It is also listed in the US Official Drug Reference Manual as a legitimate treatment for a wide range of ailments.

1937

The Passage of the Marijuana Tax Act of 1937 ended the farming and use of all cannabis plants, including hemp, across the US, and eventually throughout most of the world.

THE WAR AGAINST CANNABIS

For more than 80 years, the world has been deprived of one of the most beneficial plants in the food chain. Cannabinoids were once widely present in global diets, and we are only beginning to understand their impact on health and wellness.

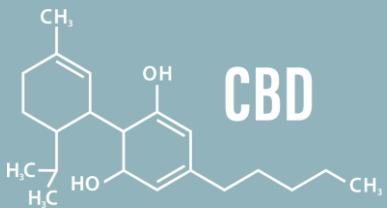

2012

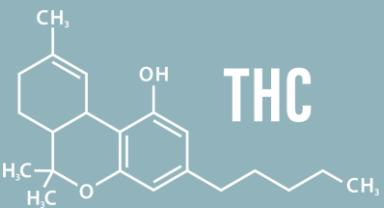

Kannaway brings hemp and CBD products back into the US and other global markets – becoming the first to launch commercial CBD products.

Dr Mechoulam also makes one of the most important scientific discoveries of the 20th century:

The Endo-Cannabinoid System (ECS)

CANNABINOIDS AND THE ECS

- CB 1 Receptor
- CB 2 Receptor

- The ECS plays a vital role in maintaining the body's overall balance or homeostasis.
- CBD interacts with the ECS to support this balance, potentially influencing processes related to detoxification, such as appetite regulation and metabolism.
- It is the largest self-regulating system in our body.
- It uses cannabinoids to transmit certain signals and regulate homeostasis in our body.
- It balances our mood, appetite, sleep, and hormone production.

Metabolic Crisis. What is it?

A metabolic crisis is a serious health condition that occurs when there is low blood sugar and build-up of toxic substances in the blood. Leads to symptoms like poor appetite choices, weight gain, nausea, and extreme sleepiness.

If untreated, it can result in severe complications such as seizures or coma or death.

The metabolic crisis is projected to have an enormous global economic impact with costs associated with overweight and obesity alone expected to exceed $4 trillion annually by 2035.
